When our Children Become Adults
The Role of Parents and Siblings

Before you know it your children are grown adults. If you have an adult child with special needs there are many questions about the future. This seminar will discuss the experiences of adult siblings and how siblings can support their sibling with disabilities’ future.

This presentation will share information on the following:

- How can families support the relationship of siblings in the future?
- Why is future planning important to adult siblings of people with disabilities?
- How can families include siblings in future planning?
- Preparing for the future caregivers

Presenter: Angela Martin, LMSW

Angela Martin is a Community Support Specialist with the Developmental Disabilities Institute (DDI), Michigan’s Center for Excellence in Developmental Disabilities, at Wayne State University. She is a co-founding member of Michigan Supporting and Including Brothers and Sisters (MI SIBS), a state chapter of the Sibling Leadership Network.
